"The Little Store With a Big Conscience"

Worked Way to High Position.

The Right Hon. Andrew Fisher, former prime minister of Australia, who has come to London to take up the duties of high commissioner for the commonwealth, in succession to Sir George Reid, is fifty-four years of age. He began life as a pitboy at ten, with his father, who was a working collier. He practically educated himself. When he was thirty-one he entered the Queensland parliament after working in the gold fields, where his sterling character earned for him much popularity among the diggers. A keen debater, organizer and labor student, he steadily climbed the ladder of political fame and success, culminating in his appointment as prime minister of Australia in 1910.—London Mail.

GOLF FOR THE INSANE

By United Press.
Elgin, Ill., July 28.—Like to play golf?
Here's how: Come to Illinois and go crazy.
Superintendent H. J. Gahagan of the state hospital for the mentally deficient here, urges golf for the insane.
"Golf is of great benefit to the patients, not only physically but mentally," Superintendent Gahagan said today. "The game is a popular amusement here. Due to the absence of intense excitement, it is helpful to those with mental disorder. It gives them the exercise essential, yet they do not feel that it is part of their duty or treatment."

Return from Motor Trip.

With their little ship intact and the travelers in a gay mood, Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Laeds returned last evening from a motor trip which covered 2,267 miles, taking them through western Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas and Oklahoma. Throughout the trip they camped at night except during ten days that they spent on a ranch in New Mexico where trout fishing and mountains snow-capped were nearby. The longest drive during any one day was 237 miles. They left a point seven miles north of Caldwell, Kan., yesterday morning at 8 o'clock and reached home at 6 p. m., the day's run covering 168 miles. They were gone five weeks. Next year we are going to head straight for that New Mexico ranch," said the doctor. "It is the finest place of all."

"SHORTY" DELIVERS HIMSELF

After Spectacular Escape and Unsuccessful Hunt the Little Negro is Again in Prison Cell

"Shorty" Fletcher, the resourceful little negro who has been in and out of jail with painful regularity, reported to Jailer Dryden this morning and admitted that he was at the end of his rope and unable to furnish combined bonds in the sum of $1700, which was made necessary on account of bondsmen in two separate cases having surrendered him and declared that they desired to be released from these bonds.

Shorty was supposed to be resting peacefully behind the bars during the past three days. Instead, he was hibernating in parts unknown, careless property owners and high weeds having proved his salvation. Early in the week he was delivered by a bondsman in the county court and Fletcher was turned over to Jailer Dryden for safe keeping. The jailer's attention being momentarily attracted in another direction Shorty slipped away and was lost in the weeds. The entire town and country were scoured in the search, but without avail. The sheriff's officers drove 24 miles last night on a false clue and other deputies hunted the diminutive fugitive in Chickasha. The trail probably became too "hot" and he delivered himself at the jail today unattended and without comment. The charges on which he was under bond in assault with intent to kill Stella Hays and having intoxicating liquors in his possession.

A Crab's Ingenious Disguise.
There is a species of small crab found upon the English coast that is so afraid of its enemies that it has found out, or perhaps been taught, a clever way to hide itself. An Englishman had one of these crabs as a pet, and he was lucky enough to visit the creature when it was in the very act of making his "wig." The crab first tore off a piece of green, ribbonlike seaweed with his pincers and placed one end in his mouth. This he sucked and nibbled and moistened with some secretion of the nature of glue, that hardened under water, and then he pressed the sticky end upon his back. By and by his back was covered with a regular green and waving wig, so that, as he crawled about, he looked like a bunch of seaweed in gentle motion. It is to be presumed that such a crab makes a sweet mouthful for a hungry fish, and that he makes the wig to prevent his being gobbled up. From time to time, of course, the wig requires repairing.
